WORK EXPERIENCE

|--|--|
| • Dates (from – to) | 2009 – 2014 |
| • Name and address of employer | Rambøll,
Hannemanns Allé 53,
DK-2300 Copenhagen S. |
| • Type of business or sector | Multi-disciplinary engineering consultancy company. |
| • Occupation or position held | Student assistant / fieldworker, Geophysics Department. |
| • Main activities and responsibilities | I worked on projects mainly concerned with seismic measuring- and geological mapping of water resources in Denmark, Norway & Sweden. The work demanded a very heavy workload for intense periods. Beside the projects named below, I also did desk job tasks for a minority of my time at Rambøll. Among other projects were the following:

Sweden, Helsingborg
I assisted in the preparations for the construction of an underground railroad tunnel in Helsingborg, where seismic measurements had to be made in order to decide where to actually dig the tunnel. I spent 2 weeks in Sweden working on this project.

Norway, Eidsvoll
I spent 2 weeks making on-water- and mountain geological mappings of the lake 'Mjøsa' and its surroundings at Eidsvoll in Norway. This was markedly different, since we did our measurements not with the usual measuring equipment, but with dynamite.

Denmark, Seismic measurements
Seismic measurements in Sønderjylland, Gram, Tønder, Holstebro, Mariager, Østerbro, Nykøbing-Falster, Hillerød & Herning, Denmark. Worked on each location for a duration of 1-3 weeks or more.

Hillerød, Photographic documentation
Photo-documentation, categorization and registration of houses and property in the municipality of Hillerød with the goal of determining preexisting damages. Involved a great deal of coordination, permissions and contact with and from residents. I worked on this in the field alone. Duration 1 month. |

ANNEXES

I used to admire people who could 'improvise' their way through hard and complex problems; they had a sort of charming easiness. Then I started studying at the University and I learned the hard way that the amount of hours you put into something is the determining factor of how good you are going to be. Today I use that discipline to plan my life in a way that allows the required time for work as well as leisure. This makes me a very stable and structured employee.

I have spent the majority of my waking life in social situations; I am usually at ease, relaxed, and feel no real issues with expressing myself or understanding others. I understand the intricate social processes that drive good teamwork and I am able to set aside my own needs and wants in favor of the social- or common goal, knowing when this is in need, but also when it is not. Both my academic and work-related experiences have been spent in collaboration with others, where the need for social skills and clear communication has been a basic requirement.

My main technical competence is the way I think about problems; computational systems make good sense to me. I study Computer Science, from which I have a large set of technical competences that cannot be fully elaborated in this short section. I am versed in functional, imperative and object-oriented programming, common data structures and algorithmic thinking. My most used language is F#, which is a functional-oriented .NET programming language, but otherwise I enjoy programming with Python.

I play the guitar and have done so since I was 15. I also keep a journal 2-3 times a week. I use this to understand what I want from my life, how to get there and to keep track of my progress. I also read a fair amount of books (one every week). I read because I discovered how much more general knowledge allows me to get from any experience I have. Entire lives have been spent in search of great insights and these discoveries have subsequently been written down in books; all I have to do is pick them up and read.
